BUSINESS PATTERNS IN BOSTON HARBOR NEIGHBORHOOD AREAS

The neighborhood areas adjacent to Boston Harbor account for more than one-third of all jobs in private businesses in the City of Boston. The business establishments that provide those jobs are engaged in a broad range of activities.

The most accurate data on employment in sub-city areas of Boston are County Business Patterns by zip code areas (1981). For the nine zip code areas that touch the waterfront (02109, 02110, 02122, 02124, 02125, 02127, 02128, 02129 and 02210) the file shows 5,600 private business establishments and 151,000 jobs (see Figure 1 and Tables 1 and 2). This includes 43,000 jobs in finance, insurance, real estate and business services in the inner harbor waterfront (including the City's financial district), 14,000 manufacturing jobs in Charlestown, East Boston, and South Boston; 11,000 jobs at Logan Airport; and 8,700 jobs in eating and drinking places and hotels.

Compared to the City of Boston as a whole (see first two columns of Table 1), the Boston Harbor Neighborhood zip code areas specialize in transportation and finance/insurance/real estate. In fact, the Harbor areas include over 60 percent of all transportation/public utility jobs and nearly one-half of all finance employment in the City. This may not be surprising, considering that the Harbor areas include Logan Airport and Boston's "financial district". On the other hand, the Harbor areas have relatively less retail trade and services employment than the City as a whole. Still, these areas had 43,600 jobs in services, primarily business, health and legal services.

Although the waterfront was once vital to the City's job base, the Boston economy is now dominated by land-based activities related to information, knowledge, communication, finance, health and educational services, legal and business services and retail trade. In Boston's modern urban economy, marine-related activities currently account for only a tiny fraction of the City's job base. Marine-related activities such as fishing, water transportation, ship repair, fuel distribution, cargo handling, recreational boating, and retailers of marine supplies employ, at most, 4,000 workers.

Hotels, offices, restaurants, museums and manufacturing plants, employ around 15,000-20,000 workers.

The Boston Harbor Neighborhoods

The zip code areas may be grouped into five neighborhoods: East Boston (02128) and Charlestown (02129) are single zip codes; the Inner Harbor Waterfront is represented by zip code areas 02109 and 02110; South Boston is comprised of two codes (02127 and 02210); and Dorchester includes three zips (02122, 02124, and 02125). The number of employees for each of the five neighborhoods and the percent composition are summarized in columns 3-7 of Table 1. The appendix to this report includes detailed tables on the number of establishments and number of employees by business type for each of the five neighborhoods and each individual zip code area. The remainder of this report describes the business patterns in the five neighborhoods.

East Boston

Transportation accounted for more than one-half of all private sector jobs in East Boston in 1981 (see column 3 of Table 1 and Table 4). Most of the 12,000 jobs in the transportation sector were located at Logan International Airport. Delta Airlines, Eastern Airlines, Trans World Airlines, and U.S. Air were the largest employers. This part of the job base looks secure as the airport handles increasing numbers of passengers and a steady stream of cargo.

Light manufacturing added another 2,800 jobs in 1981, mainly in transportation equipment (830), apparel (700), silverware (670) and textile mill products (360). By 1983, according to data from the Economic Development and Industrial Corporation of Boston (EDIC), apparel manufacturing had expanded to employ 1,245 workers and silverware manufacturing had increased to 800 jobs. However, that growth and other expansions of existing business establishments were nearly offset by contractions in East Boston. Transportation equipment dropped to 200 jobs (in shipbuilding and repair) and textile mill products fell to zero as three producers moved or went out of business. Like Charlestown, East Boston has less than 200 jobs in finance/insurance/real estate or less than 1 percent of the neighborhood's private employment base. The construction and wholesale trade sectors (less than 4 percent of the total, combined) are also tiny compared to the City as a whole.

Most likely, large portions of the retail trade (2,800 employees) and services (4,000 employees) sectors are related to activity at Logan Airport. By observation, several hotels, eating and drinking places and business services are located in or near the airport terminals. The other chief retail center is Central/Maverick Square, which was designated as a Commercial Area Revitalization District in February 1982. According to Polk Directory Surveys, the number of key stores in the district has remained steady over the last twenty years. The Polk Directory counted ten key stores in 1981, eight stores in 1973, nine in 1965. Notable growth occurred from 1955 (five key stores) to 1965.

Water transportation accounts for less than 200 jobs and there is no significant fishing activity in East Boston. However, some of the employment in transportation equipment is related to ship building and repair.

Charlestown

Charlestown's specialty is manufacturing (see column 4 of Table 1 and Table 5). In fact, 3,200 or 48 percent of this neighborhood's private jobs (1981) were in manufacturing, primarily in food processing (milk, sugar, candy, etc.). According to EDIC's Boston Manufacturing Universe, between 1977 and 1983, the number of manufacturing establishments fell from 33 to 24, but employment dropped by only 250, or 7 percent. The majority of Charlestown's manufacturers have been in continuous operation for several years and have maintained or increased their employment levels. Most of the "lost" establishments were small operations that moved out of Boston. However, in 1984 two of the five large food processing plants--Revere Sugar Company and Schrafft Candy Company--closed and eliminated about 1,200 jobs. H.P. Hood and Amstar Corporation are the two largest remaining manufacturing establishments.

The other specialties of Charlestown are transportation services (650 jobs), wholesale trade (540 jobs) and educational services (370 jobs, including Bunker Hill Community College).

Charlestown's relatively small finance and service sectors make up only 18 percent of the neighborhood's employment while those sectors account for 55 percent of the City's private job base. Thompson Square is a key retail center that is designated as a Commercial Area Revitalization District.

Virtually no fishing or water transportation jobs are present in Charlestown.

Inner Harbor Waterfront

This area specializes in finance and services. In particular, banking, insurance, security and commodity brokerage, real estate and business and legal services made up 56 percent of the private sector job base in this area in 1981 (see column 5 of Table 1 and Table 6). The City's "financial district" and the rest of the Inner Harbor Waterfront accounted for 42 percent of Boston's finance/insurance/real estate employment.

The Inner Harbor Waterfront also had 4,300 jobs in communications, 4,500 in health services and 4,000 in engineering, architecture, accounting and miscellaneous services. Textile mill products (730 jobs), printing and publishing (660) and chemicals (550) were prominent in a relatively small manufacturing base. Wholesale and retail trade make up less than 10 percent of total employment in this area, compared to 19 percent for the City as a whole. Boston's major retail shopping are away from the waterfront, closer to pedestrian, vehicular and transit traffic.

Marine-related employment appears to be limited to 350 jobs in water transportation and perhaps 200 more in transportation services and miscellaneous sectors.

Large employers (over 1,000 employees) in the Inner Harbor waterfront area include Bank of Boston, Bank of New England, Shawmut

South Boston

In 1981, manufacturing supported one-third of the private employment base in South Boston. (See column 6 of Table 1 and Table 7.) In fact, South Boston had 15 percent of Boston's manufacturing employment and 40 percent of the Boston Harbor neighborhoods' manufacturing base. South Boston's 8,300 manufacturing jobs were concentrated in food processing, apparel, electric and electronic equipment, and, foremost, printing and publishing. However, all but one major industrial group (petroleum and coal products) were represented in South Boston's manufacturing sector. By 1983, according to EDIC, expansion in apparel manufacturing (+700 jobs) had nearly offset contractions in printing and publishing (-300 jobs), non-electrical machinery (-200), miscellaneous manufacturing (-200), and small employment reductions in various other industries. From 1979 to 1983, much movement occurred into and out of South Boston. Five small firms (30 employees) moved to South Boston from outside of the City. Another 29 firms (980 employees) moved to South Boston from another neighborhood in Boston. In addition, 20 small firms started new operations in South Boston. Over the same four years, 13 establishments moved to another neighborhood of Boston (240 employees), 37 establishments (1,500 employees) moved out of the City, and 56 operations (with 1,500 employees) went out of business. This neighborhood has been a long-standing manufacturing area, and it should maintain a large and varied manufacturing base with growth at the Boston Marine Industrial Park and other industrial space.

South Boston also has a relatively large wholesale trade sector: 17 percent of neighborhood employment and 17 percent of Boston's wholesale trade employment. Retail trade (3,100 jobs) is another important sector in South Boston. This neighborhood, with its small services sector, resembles East Boston and Charlestown. South Boston has no hotels, no museums, and has less than seventy employees in educational and legal services, combined. The services are comprised mainly of business, health and social services.

West Broadway was designated as a Commercial Area Revitalization District in March 1979. The number of key stores along East and West Broadway numbered thirteen in 1981, ten in 1973 and 1965, and thirteen in 1955 (based on the Polk Directory).

Dorchester

The Dorchester area had a private employment base that resembled the City's base in 1981(see column 7 of Table 1, percent composition, and Table 8). Services provided 36 percent of all private jobs, led by health services (4,000 jobs) and business services (1,100 jobs). This data excludes the jobs in public (state) education at the University of Massachusetts' Columbia Point campus. Banking (2,300 jobs), boosted the finance sector to 13 percent of Dorchester's job base.

The retail trade sector was relatively large (20 percent of total) due to food stores (1,200 jobs) and eating and drinking places (1,300).

Dorchester's manufacturing sector was of average size for the City: 13 percent of total private employment. In the Boston Manufacturing Universe in 1983, one-half of the manufacturing jobs in Dorchester* were in printing and publishing (3,200 jobs). Food processing (800), machinery (380) and primary metals (290) were the other leading industries. Even though the neighborhood area had thirty fewer firms in 1983 than in 1977, employment fell by only 600 over the four years. The sources of change were 10 establishments (400 jobs) moving out of Dorchester and 28 firms (400 jobs) going out of business, with one firm (250 jobs) moving to Dorchester from outside the City and 11 firms (300 jobs) moving to Dorchester from elsewhere in Boston. Most of the manufacturing in Dorchester is non-marine in nature, but some of the transportation equipment manufacturing (430 jobs) is related to ship building and repair.

Among the largest employers in South Boston are the Globe Newspaper, Colonial Provision Company, Carney Hospital and St. Margaret's Hospital.

Apparently, Dorchester is the harbor neighborhood that is most "residential" in character. The predominant businesses are services and retail trade that are provided mainly for nearby residents. In the other neighborhoods, much more of the land area is occupied by manufacturing plants, transportation facilities or office buildings.

Dorchester has long stretches of public beaches, but marine-related commercial activity is minimal.

* In the BMU, Dorchester includes Mattapan. The Mattapan zip code area (02126) had only four manufacturing establishments (100 jobs) in 1981.
